National Kidney Foundation International: Visiting Professor Program

As part of its professional education and research activities, the National Kidney Foundation sponsors a Visiting Professor Program to encourage the dissemination of scientific and clinical information between internationally renowned professionals from abroad, with special expertise in the areas of nephrology and urology, and individuals in the United States working in these areas. A total of 2 or 3 visiting professors per year will be supported depending on available funds. Selections will be made by the Executive Committee of the Scientific Advisory Board of the National Kidney Foundation.

This program will pay round trip coach air fare plus a modest honorarium. Each award will not exceed US$ 2,500. Host institutions are expected to provide costs for local accommodations, travel, and if possible, an additional honorarium. The following criteria should be used in preparing applications:

- The visiting professor should be an established, recognized authority in the area of nephrology or urology.
- The candidate will visit at least 3 or 4 medical centers in the United States.
- The application should contain letters from the principal hosts of each participating medical center, indicating their willingness to host the visitor and describing planned activities for the proposed visiting professor.
- Evidence should be provided in the application that the visit of the candidate will enhance or otherwise stimulate research, or will provide new information that is likely to benefit patients with kidney or urologic disorders.
- Arrangements should be made to encourage participation of Affiliates of the National Kidney Foundation in each locality.
- All announcements should include recognition that the individual is an International Visiting Professor of the National Kidney Foundation.

Applications are made by an American Nephrologist or Urologist and should be submitted to the national office of the National Kidney Foundation by October 1 for appointments in the following calendar year. Please send applications to:
