*Rosa Rangel
Maribel Lizarzabal*

University of Zulia School of Medicine and University Hospital of Maracaibo, Venezuela

Familial Multiple Congenital Esophageal Rings

A 47-year-old Venezuelan woman presented for evaluation of food impaction. She reported intermittent episodes of solid dysphagia without weight loss since childhood. Her diet consisted primarily of puréed and liquid foods in six daily meals. A sister suffered from similar complaints and it is believed that she has the same condition [1].

Reference

- 1 Harridan CA, Eaton RM: Familial multiple congenital esophageal rings: Report of an affected father and son. Am J Gastroenterol 1992;87:1813–1815.