A Note from the Editors

During the last Members Meeting of the International Society of Hemofiltration (ISH), it was unanimously decided that henceforth the ISH should bear the name International Society of Blood Purification (ISBP). The journal Blood Purification, which however will not be renamed, also will serve in the future as the official publication organ of the ISPB. As in the past, the abstract s of the Society's meeting will be published as well as the lecture of the recipient of the Holger Crafoord award, which is annually donated.

The editors of this journal consider the change from ISH to ISPB as a fortunate event, as they strongly believe that the journal will certainly profit from this renaming, which signals an extension of the Society's aims. The journal is now more than ever open for contributions related to the broad field of blood purification. As in the past, manuscripts from non-members and members of the ISPB are welcome. However, all papers will be subjected to constructive peer review before their acceptance. On this occasion we wish to thank all reviewers who have generously provided prompt assessment of manuscripts since the first appearance of Blood Purification :
