Eur Neurol 2009;61:128
DOI: 10.1159/000180317

Dual Malignant Peripheral Nerve Sheath Tumors: Common in Nature but Different in Images

Cheng-Chiang Chang, Shin-Tsu Chang

Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation,
Tri-Service General Hospital, School of Medicine,
National Defense Medical Center, Taipei, Taiwan

A 20-year-old girl presented with acute paraplegia. T₁-weighted MRI revealed a nonenhanced tumor located at the spinal epidural space at the L₂–L₃ spinal level and another heterogeneously enhanced tumor involving the paraspinal muscles. The surgical pathology disclosed these dual tumors to be consistent with the epithelioid variant of malignant peripheral nerve sheath tumor.

Shin-Tsu Chang
Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation
Tri-Service General Hospital, National Defense Medical Center
No. 325, Section 2, Cheng-Kung Road, Neihu District
Taipei 114 (Taiwan)
Tel. +886 2 8792 3311, Fax +886 945 60 5523
E-Mail stchang@ms87.url.com.tw