Contents, Vol. 28, 1977

Contents
Heinemann, G.W. †: Address to the 11th European Conference on Psychosomatic Research IX
Introduction Bräutigam, W. and Rad, M. von: Towards a Theory of Psychosomatic Disorders ... XI
Basic Concepts of Psychosomatic Medicine
Kimball, C.P.: The Languages of Psychosomatic Medicine 1
Singer, M.T.: Psychological Dimensions in Psychosomatic Patients 13
Shands, H.C.: Suitability for Psychotherapy. II. Unsuitability and Psychosomatic Disease 28
Schneider, P.-B.: The Observer, the Psychosomatic Phenomenon and the Setting of the Observation 36
Observations
Wolff, H.H.: The Contribution of the Interview Situation to the Restriction of Phantasy Life and Emotional Experience in Psychosomatic Patients 58
Philippopoulos, G.S.: Some Remarks on the Etymological and Grammatic Aspects of the Term ‘Alexithymia’ 68
Discussion 71
Gottschalk, L.A.: Recent Advances in the Content Analysis of Speech and the Application of this Measurement Approach to Psychosomatic Research 73
Rad, M. von; Lalucat, L., and Lolas, F.: Differences of Verbal Behaviour in Psychosomatic and Psychoneurotic Patients 83
Overbeck, G.: How to Operationalize Alexithymic Phenomena – Some Findings from Speech Analysis and the Giessen Test (GT) 106
Discussion 118
Contents VI
Larsen, F. and Mogstad, T.-E.: Neurosis and Psychosomatic Disorders: Aspects of Differentiation 121
Taylor, G.J.: Alexithymia and the Counter-Transference 141
Hoppe, K.D. and Bogen, J.E.: Alexithymia in Twelve Commissurotomized Patients 148
Pierloot, R. and Vinck, J.: A Pragmatic Approach to the Concept of Alexithymia 156
Consumption of Normal and Alexithymic Subjects in Response to Affect-Provoking Thoughts 167
Frankel, F.H.; Apfel-Savitz, R.; Nemiah, J.C., and Sifneos, P.E.: The Relationship between Hypnotizability and Alexithymia 172
Jackson, M.: Psychopathology and ‘Pseudo-Normality’ in Ulcerative Colitis 179
Liedtke, R.; Freyberger, H., and Zepf S.: Personality Features of Patients with Ulcerative Colitis 187
Theories
Nemiah, J.C.: Alexithymia. Theoretical Considerations 199
MacLean, P.D.: The Triune Brain in Conflict 207
Discussion 226
Brede, K.: A Social-Psychological Approach to the Specificity of Psychosomatic Diseases 230
Cremerius, J.: Some Reflections about the Conception of ‘Psychosomatic Patients’ in the French School 236
Discussion 252
Waring, E.M.: The Role of the Family in Symptom Selection and Perpetuation in Psychosomatic Illness 253
Gaddini, R.: The Pathology of the Self as a Basis of Psychosomatic Disorders 260
Mitscherlich, M.: The Significance of the Transitional Object for Psychosomatic Thinking 272
Zepf, S.: Primary Socialisation and Alexithymic Defects in Symbol and Concept Formation 278
Contents VII
Therapeutic Approaches
Bastiaans, J.: The Implications of the Specificity Concept for the Treatment of Psychosomatic Patients 285
Ford, Ch. V. and Long, K.D.: Group Psychotherapy of Somatizing Patients 294
Roberts, J.P.: The Problems of Group Psychotherapy for Psychosomatic Patients 305
Sellschopp-Rüppell, A.: Behavioural Characteristics in In-Patient Group Psychotherapy with Psychosomatic Patients 316
Apfel-Savitz, R.; Silverman, D., and Bennett, M.I.: Group Psychotherapy of Patients with Somatic Illnesses and Alexithymia 323
Becker, H.: A Non-Verbal Therapeutic Approach to Psychosomatic Disorders ... 330 Freyberger, H.: Supportive Psychotherapeutic Techniques in Primary and Secondary Alexithymia 337
Discussion 343
Varia
Stephanos, S. and Auhagen, U.: Beyond the Psychosomatic Phenomenon. Reflexions on the Life of Blaise Pascal 346
Sellschopp-Rüppell, A. and Rad, M. von: Pinocchio – a Psychosomatic Syndrome 357
Panel- and Plenum Discussion: Psychotherapeutic Problems with Psychosomatic Patients 361
Retrospective View on the Conference
Wolff, H.H.: The Concept of Alexithymia and the Future of Psychosomatic Research 376
List of Contributors 389