Chapter 3: Enter the Gates of Heaven 21
Chapter 4: Settling Down 29
Chapter 5: I Move to Hadassah 35
Chapter 6: Broadening Horizons 43
Chapter 7: The Assassination of Chaim Arlosoroff 49
Chapter 8: The German Flood 57
Chapter 9: Secrecy and Riots 65
Chapter 10: Enter Anni 73
Chapter 11: Patients and Payments 81
Chapter 12: Coping with an Air Raid 93
Chapter 13: IZL Threatens Shulamit 101
Chapter 14: The Blackest Day of Our Lives 109
Chapter 15: Siege and Massacre 117
Chapter 16: Descent from Mount Scopus 123
Chapter 17: A Medical School is Born in War 131
Chapter 18: The Golden Land 139
Chapter 19: I Leave Hadassah 147
Chapter 20: The Mountain and the Sea 153
Chapter 21: Saving Israel from Thalidomide 161
Chapter 22: Full Circle 167

FOREWORD BY ANNA KLEEGER
Professor Julius J. Kleeberg, died on April 15, 1988, at the age of 94. Although he never wrote his autobiography, he left behind him voluminous note-books, which he intended to use as the basis for an autobiography some day.
From these notebooks, together with my husband's scientific books and articles, Philip Gillon and I have tried to create a mosaic depicting the man who was loved and revered by so many patients and friends: a physician, a scientist, a humanist of broad culture and vision, a wit, a humorist, a raconteur -- not least, a most devoted husband.
I am deeply grateful to Professor Daniel Diengott, who was my husband's assistant for many years, and who very kindly went over the manuscript.
I thank also my friends Sarah Salomon and Chava Teltsch, who encouraged me to bring this book to life.
For me the book has been like an evocation of a noble spirit. I hope that we have succeeded in conveying the creativity and personality of Professor Kleeberg to our readers.