Experimental Studies on the Pathogenesis of Renal Lesions due to Incompatible Transfusions

I. Liotta, P. Murino, A. Buzzonetti and L. Quintilani
Rome, Italy

Abstract

The renal alterations observed in rabbits after intravenous injection of homogenates of homologous erythrocyte stroma which have been repeatedly washed, have been studied. Histological examination initially demonstrated a state of glomerular collapse followed by regressive alterations of the tubular epithelium. The data are reported for further experimental studies performed in order to clarify the mechanism of production of the above lesions.