A major decision was taken together between the European Association of Urology (EAU) and the Association Française d'Urologie (AFU). It was decided to co-publish the best selected articles submitted to Progrès en Urologie in French for simultaneous publication in English in European Urology.

In practical terms, authors submitting their original articles in French to Progrès en Urologie and after the usual selection process by the reviewers and the Editorial decision, the most interesting papers will be selected and offered simultaneous co-publication after translation in English in European Urology.

Likewise, papers submitted from French-speaking authors directly in English to European Urology and after acceptance will also be offered co-publication, after translation in French, in Progrès en Urologie.

To avoid any copyright and legal problems, the articles will only be referenced once as the original English version in European Urology allowing also a high impact factor.

It will be clearly mentioned on the first page of each article that it is co-published in both journals with only one reference indexed.

The same strict rules of selection of articles will of course be applied and the present acceptance rate of submitted papers to European Urology will be maintained.

The Editors of both journals encourage potential authors to take advantage of this new opportunity to increase the diffusion and impact of their best works.

A similar approach is underway with other national societies from Europe and their respective journals to offer within European Urology a selection of the best works done in Europe.

Prof. Vincent Delmas, Prof. Claude Schulman