The article “Fifty Years of Acute Ischemic Stroke Treatment: A Personal History” [Cerebrovasc Dis., DOI: 10.1159/000519843] by Grotta incorrectly states that the author of the reference [88] was hired to write an article on the NINDS study and its investigators. The sentence “They even hired an investigative reporter to write up an attack on the study and its investigators, which unbelievably got published in the BMJ [88].” should correctly read “An investigative reporter wrote an attack on the study and its investigators, which unbelievably got published in the BMJ [88].”
